The candidates for degrees, members of the faculties, and trustees of the university and colleges will assemble at 9:30 a. m. at the university building in academic dress, and the university procession will start for Memorial Continental Hall at 10 a. m., and will there occupy places assigned to them on the platform and in the body of the house. The requirements for this degree are most exacting, and the determination as to whether the candidates have meas-ured up to the standard set by the university rests with a board of experts in the various subjects of the theses, not connected with the university.

The names of the candidates, with the States from which they have come, are

The good citizens of our sister State of Indiana have been called Hoosiers for some time past at home and abroad, sometimes honorably and sometimes the revirse. As the term has become general it is high time that its origin and definition should be as generally known, Before that section of the public lands was regularly surveyed, many families located and were called squatters. The surveyors on finding one of these would ask, "Who's here?" and place the name on their map. The question became so familiar that on the first view of the smoke of a cabin the exclamation of another "Who's here?" became equally so until it eventuated in the general term of Hoosier."
